Our table included participants from Romania, Germany and Ukraine. A young woman from Ukraine described the situation in her country. Her question - how can we speak about culture while bombs are falling elsewhere? - affected us deeply.

Respect and tolerance are fundamental. Culture can make a major contribution to connecting people. Different ethnic identities, backgrounds and traditions do not have to divide us. Despite our differences, we share the same goal: we want to live in peace and without fear. We should work together for that goal.
